

Town Supervisor's Report

Dear Friends & Fellow Community Members,

Hello, and welcome to another edition of Wilmington News & Notes.

This report covers some terrain that will be familiar to the most dedicated readers of WN&N ... but some of the information is new.

As always, please let me know if you do not want to receive Wilmington News & Notes in the future, and if you have friends or family members who might like to subscribe to WN&N, please ask them to email me.

1.

The town board is hosting a "town hall forum" on Wednesday, at 6 p.m.

This will be an open community forum for questions, ideas, concerns, etc.

I hope we will spend at least some time talking about

A) What do you see as the biggest problems in Wilmington?

&

B) What projects (dredging the river, expanding bike lanes, skating pavilion, etc.) should the town board focus on?

I hope to hear your ideas, and your concerns.

2.

There is a town board meeting tonight, and the agenda is characteristically ambitious. If we aren't near the end of it by 7:45 or so, we will probably table the remaining discussion items. The agenda is at the end of this email.

3.

The "public hearing" on the zoning code amendments we've been discussing for the past several years will close this evening. You can still submit written comments via the town website, and you can say anything you would like to say (about the zoning amendments) at the start of the meeting tonight.

Here is a good article about the amendments:

<https://www.adirondackdailyenterprise.com/news/local-news/2026/01/wilmington-to-hold-zoning-amendments-public-hearing/>

If you would like to watch / listen to the first part of the public hearing, followed by some general discussion about the amendments, you can watch the first part of the most-recent town board meeting here.

4.

Speaking of the town website: In the past few weeks Laura Hooker has diligently updated, edited, and improved the site. You can check it out here.

5.

The efforts to update Wilmington's Comprehensive Plan are getting in gear, and in the near future the town board will likely appoint a "steering committee" to steer the process for the next month or two (or three).

Thank you to everyone who attended either of the first two Comprehensive Plan meetings, and thanks to Pat Winch and Hanna Cromie for organizing and chairing those meetings.

If you are interested in participating in this process, we want to hear from you. Please write to Hanna at hannacromie@townofwilmington.org to get in the loop about the plan.

There will be many opportunities to contribute, in ways large and small.

All for now — thanks for reading.

Sincerely,

Tim Follos